Why measure results?

“If you don’t measure it,
you can’t improve it.”

Joe’s corollary:

If you don’t use the right measure,
you won’t make the right improvements.

Why measure results?

- Improve marketing efforts
- Create respect and accountability
  - Demonstrate that marketing drives revenue and profits
  - Show the value of a budget increase/decrease
- Know where to best spend budget
  - If your budget increases by $1, where would you spend that additional dollar?

What to Measure?

What to measure?

---

- What is the goal of the campaign?
- What do we want to improve?
- What do your CEO and CFO want to know?
- Does the measure establish the value of the activity?
- Can you act on it?

What to measure: Example 1

---

Acquisition/Lead Generation

- Goal:
  - Acquire donors/orders/leads at the best cost possible
- What do we want to improve:
  - Cost per donor/order/lead
  - Response rate
- What do CEO & CFO want to know:
  - Are we generating enough new donors/orders/leads?
  - Are we staying within budget?
- Does the measure establish the value?
- Can we act on it?

What to measure: Example 2

Renewal/Remarketing/Resolicitation

- Goal:
  - Generate net income
- What do we want to improve:
  - Net income per thousand
- What do CEO & CFO want to know:
  - How much net income are we generating?
- Does the measure establish the value?
- Can we act on it?

What not to measure

---

- Vanity measures
  - e-mail open rates, click rates
  - likes, retweets, pins, followers
- Activity instead of results
  - number blog posts, Tweets, followers
  - attendance at an event; “leads” gathered from a trade show; e-mail addresses gathered
  - e-mails sent; page views

What not to measure (con't)

---

- Quantity without quality
  - Are leads qualified
  - Are new acquisitions likely to give/renew/buy again?
- What is easy to measure
  - Sometimes getting at revenue and profit measures isn't easy or even possible
    - Investment products
    - Pharmaceuticals
    - Travel

Who to Measure?

Who to measure?

---

- Campaign: based on contacts
  - Is the campaign meeting goals?
    - Acquisition: cost per donor/lead/order
    - Remarketing: net income (per thousand)
    - Conversion/Upgrade: cost per conversion and payback
  - Results by segment
  - Long-term measures for premium and discount offers
  - Generally not ROI
    - The cost of a campaign is an operating expense, not an investment
    - Acquisition/lead generation is the investment

Who to measure?

---

- Long-term: based on customers (or leads)
(all customers, not just those who buy/give/renew again)
  - Lifetime value
  - Retention
  - Renewal Rate (sometimes the same as retention)
    - First time
    - Repeat
  - ROI
  - Lifecycle analysis

Where to Measure?

AARP®

Where to measure?

- In every campaign
  - To evaluate LOT
- Mid-campaign, for digital campaigns
- In every test
  - test of means
  - testing statistics
- In annual summaries

When to Measure?

AARP®

When to use which measure?

Key performance measures (KPMs) will change depending on where the organization is and the current organization goals:

- Startup: acquire customers
- Growth:
  1. acquire customers at the right cost
  2. maximize net from established customers
- Maturity (cash cow):
  1. maximize net
  2. acquire enough customers to offset attrition

The Data Model

The goal in measuring results is to create wisdom by converting data into information, information into knowledge, and knowledge into wisdom.
